Illuminating Glassware

1913 Suggestions

IN this bulletin are listed some advance styles in illuminating glassware. They cover a wide range of applications and meet many individual preferences. We especially emphasize their suggestive value, in that they show the trend of taste and indicate new possibilities in glassware designed for use in connection with high grade lighting fixtures.

The supremacy of Fostoria Products is maintained no less by the artistry of our designers than by the careful craftsmanship of our glassworkers. Elegance, simplicity and grace of form are obviously necessary in any illuminating glassware which is submitted to the trained and critical inspection of architects and fixture designers, yet to us the aesthetic appeal is no whit more important than inherent quality and perfection of finish. Therefore, we not only strive to create new and fitting styles, but we maintain the most exacting standards in every process of manufacture. Judged by this dual standard of beauty and quality, we believe that our products today will be acknowledged to represent practical perfection in illuminating glassware.

Each of the several lines here illustrated makes its special appeal.

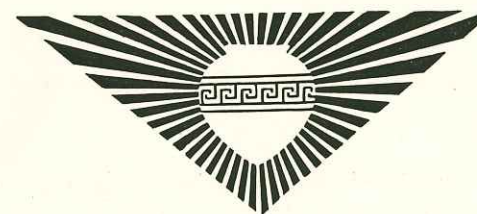

In Veluria we have the ideal "white glass"—an opal of the utmost purity yet full of fire. When cold it has the quality of the finest Italian marble: when lighted its ivory surface glows with a pleasant subdued light.

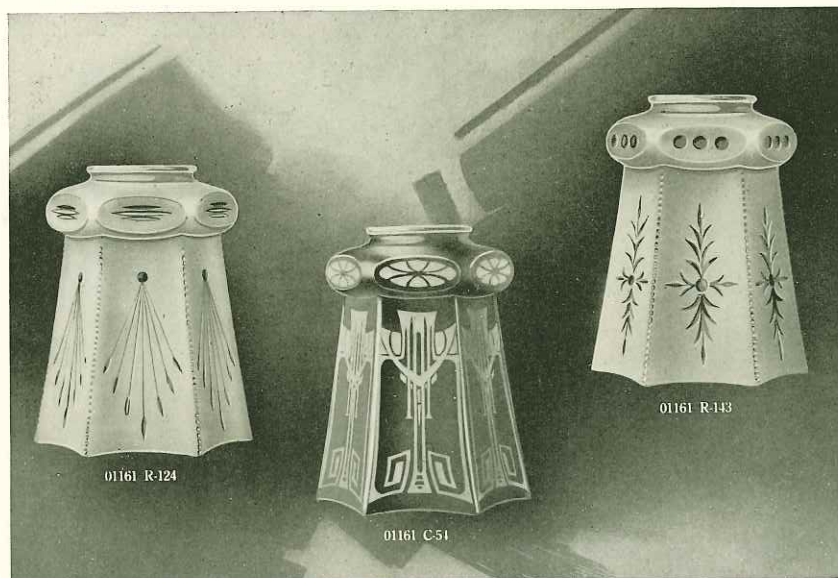

"Clearcut" is a glass of quite another character. It is radiant, sparkling, high-keyed. As it comes from the lehrs, it is the clearest glass in the world. The frosted finish is first applied and then the pieces are taken to the cutting-wheels where skillful craftsmen incise the designs. The polishing is done by a process which we believe is known to only one other concern in America and that is a manufacturer of the finest table ware. This polish is what makes "Clearcut" supreme; it is what gives it the verve and brilliance and "snap."

Of the other lines here shown, each conforms to the Fostoria ideal—artistic design and perfect finish. Each number has been carefully developed to conform to the most advanced tendency in lighting glassware. We have taken the hint from fixture designers who "know how" and have not only vitalized their suggestions but have elaborated upon them.

The results as here illustrated we are confident will appeal to refined tastes and will materially add to the prestige already enjoyed by the several lines of illuminating glassware collectively known as Fostoria Products.

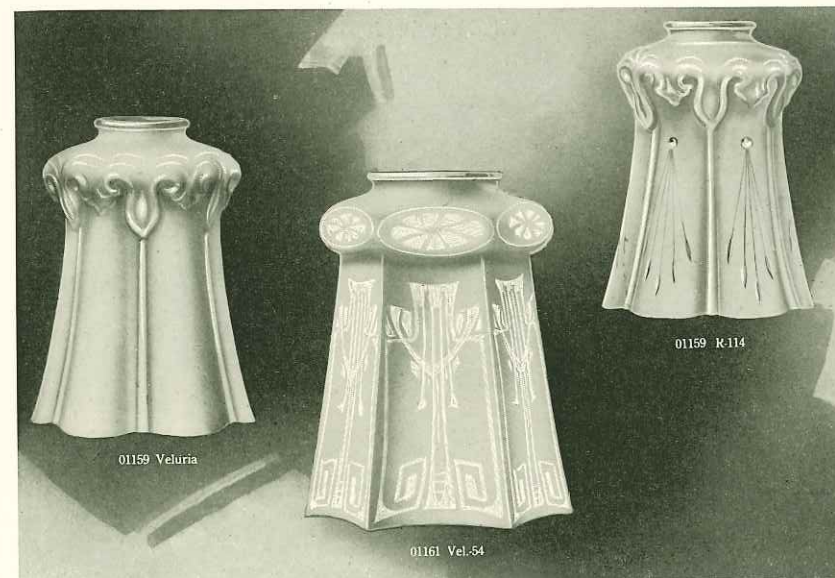

The shades above illustrated are especially designed for use with the best types of shower fixtures. The cut designs are full of that sparkle which has made this glass so popular. Nos. 01161 and 01139 are exactly similar in shape. They are furnished for different sized fitters, as shown in the table, to accommodate different lamps.

Semi-Indirect lighting is beginning to be widely used. The three designs here shown illustrate types of glass which we are prepared to supply for this use. For illustrations and prices of other bowls, address Holophane Works, Cleveland.

Unique hexagonal shapes which adapt themselves to many classes of fixture designs are shown above. The shapes are supplied in either Veluria Glass or clear glass roughed outside. Our etched work is always uniform and without the spots common to the less carefully made glass.
